

Hyperion Bank among 2024 Best Places to Work finalists

Community bank is among 20 finalists, small company category, Philadelphia Business Journal's 'Best' recognition

Philadelphia, July 26, 2024 – Hyperion Bank is among 20 finalists in the small company category for the Philadelphia Business Journal's 2024 Best Places to Work. Although the Philadelphia-based community bank, which also has a banking office and mortgage joint venture in Atlanta, was not among the three highest companies in its category when winners were revealed at a July 25 gala event, Team Hyperion is proud.

“We’re proud to be an employer of choice, and to be the only bank in our category,” says Hyperion President & COO Lou DeCesare. “And I am most proud of the fact that this was genuinely an employee-led effort, with Nicole Leitz (VP & Business Development Officer) initiating the process and other team members enthusiastically completing the steps in the BPTW nomination process.”

DeCesare notes that a number of friends, customers and business partners of the almost 18-year-old bank were among the 84 companies on this year’s list, “so it was a great opportunity to celebrate them in addition to recognizing our own incredible team.”

Among the Hyperion employee comments the Business Journal shared from nomination forms: “This is my home. The people here are amazing. We are a family and that’s important. Your voice is heard. We work hard and are rewarded for it. They care about their employees and customers. Plus, we have a work/life balance like no other.”

DeCesare chuckles that the song Hyperion team members chose to describe their company culture was “Takin’ Care of Business” by Bachman-Turner Overdrive. The Business Journal even put together a playlist of all finalists’ song choices.

“While we did not take home one of the top-place prizes,” he says, “we’re proud to be a finalist among so many top workplaces in the region. Maybe best, I get to work with this terrific team day in and day out. Congratulations to all of the winners and finalists!”
